The counter-defendant asserts that the agreement was not signed by the counter-plaintiff before the contract was complete and therefore he could not be required to pay any money. The court found that the project access agreement was not signed until after the contract had been completed, because "even though the counter-plaintiff... did not sign it until August 16, 1982, it was intended from the outset that its terms would be an integral part of the agreement." I came across Preflight Status, but it not seems to support Azure App Service deployment. Preflight Status is also a windows service. Is there any alternative to monitor App Service configuration change and log file changes from App Service Management REST API? A: Preflight Status is not a tool you can use to monitor your app service. It is just a Windows service. The Preflight Status will not collect your application logs and as you have already noticed, it does not support Azure App Service deployment.
