Coetzee: "If you look at the history of art, there has never been a monoculture. There are many, many, many cultures that have created art. Look at the African art. "Look at the Japanese art. Look at the art of Mayans. Look at the art of Chinese -- and this has existed for hundreds, if not thousands of years. "You cannot read the history of art, the history of music or the history of literature and say that there have been so many cultures in the world that they didn't make art. They made it. And you know why they made it? Because they felt compelled to create. Because they felt compelled to express a sense of beauty. Because they felt compelled to create a sense of appreciation for the experience of life. "And what is important is they felt compelled to do that. I don't know where that comes from, and why that is the source of art. I can't say that. But it exists."
