You can upgrade.Â .I have long been interested in the writings of John Maxwell on relationships, and particularly the 'big five' traits. It's been inspiring to hear that he may have shifted his interest to work with two- or three-year olds. I'll note here some of his insights that have been most meaningful to me. "People generally have three types of relationships with other people. They have an 'I-You' relationship, an 'I-

Me' relationship, and a 'Me-You' relationship." "The 'I-You' relationship is primarily for self-protection. We enjoy the feelings of specialness we get from the other person, we want to be accepted and heard, and we want to feel safe. But the 'I-Me' relationship is a social experience. We have fun with the other person, we feel loved, we enjoy the feelings of caring, and we enjoy the other person's company. But we're not fully focused on the other person. It's not the primary relationship. The 'Me-You' relationship is the one that is really exciting. The 'Me-You' relationship is the one in which we get to know and love ourselves. We care deeply about the other person, we enjoy the feelings of being close to them, and we enjoy the feelings of being cared for. But we're completely focused on them and they're completely focused on us. That◆

The profile tool is also very useful in doing some quick edits to. tool can be found here with a bit of work.Â . Q: Why does this chr(); not work when inside a loop? I'd like to take out a random number from a text file and that number has been successfully sent to a text file. But now I'm trying to change it to a char, so I can use the char to print it. When I run this code it says "segfault", but it's not segfaulting in the main(), it's in the while loop. Why? I think it's something to do with the char[] or char[][]. It's a mini project to make a replacement for rand(), and when you press the key, a random character is put in the text file, replace a space in the text with that char. I think it's something to do with the char array or char[] array. int main() { int i = 0; FILE *myfile; char *ch; myfile = fopen("./text_file", "r"); if (myfile == NULL) printf("Problem opening file!"); while (i!= 0) { ch = fgets(ch, 1024, myfile); if (ch!= NULL) { printf("
