1-5-20 Hotfix for WaveLab: Recompression of the samples in DAWFormat for new formats (including compatible with Waves Plugin Format), Fix some minor issues, Improve stability of Fusion audio converter in the following situations: Multitrack recording with using multiple sound card. High quality converter with use of max frequency of sample before decompression. High quality converter - with less CPU and memory usage.

Fix distortion caused by WaveLab by preventing the too high reduction factor of samples. Fix delay when using high-quality sounds while exporting audio in new formats. Fix sample dump after updating a user library.

What separates Steinberg from other DAWs, he says, is that you can actually create sounds in Cubase that are fully customizable based on the MIDI parameters that you manipulate in the Steinberg plug-in. He points out that, while this is a great way to create and edit samples, it can be a daunting process for those who are looking to get into the field. With Cubases loop recording capabilities, these instruments can be duplicated perfectly. Pianos and drums can be recorded and repeated, as well as notes cut and paste into the song. In addition, the Steinberg engine can be linked with the Cubase track for instant playback and jam session support. For keyboard and ukulele samples, he uses Steinbergs Padshop Pro plug-in, which lets him mold his own samples out of predefined pads. Roos loves the follow-along feature that comes with the plug-in, as it lets him follow along with a metronome. A powerful multi-effects plug-in completes the multimedia processing toolkit. Also included are 5 custom plug-ins that add the following effects: Time Signature Plus, Flanger/Echo, Compressor/Limiter, Chorus and a versatile, multi-function equalizer. Steinberg Remote EQ can control up to 12 plug-ins simultaneously.
