Archived from the original on Retrieved April 9, Retrieved April 13, Goosebumps goes VR The TV space began embracing the new medium in 2016 with a resurgence of content from classic cartoon shows like The Simpsons, but it's still all about the screen. Disney marked the occasion by resurrecting about a dozen classic animated shorts. You can watch a few of those animated shorts here, but there's a wealth of different kinds of content available on the service. You can watch shows like Trolls, Star Wars: The Old Republic, and Stranger Things for free. You can buy subscriptions for access to full episodes of shows like Once Upon a Time, House of Cards, and the Simpsons, or purchase individual episodes to watch and re-watch. The service launched in the middle of the movie season, with a few upcoming titles. You can stream this week's big releases such as Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse, Fifty Shades Freed, and A Quiet Place as well as first-run titles like Moolaadé, A Wrinkle in Time, and Baby Driver. You can find more information on all the content available, both new and old, on the main homepage. The service is also part of Disney's Digital initiative and is optimized for iOS and Android devices. Theme park hours have been extended for the third year in a row, and only a limited number of people can get into Disney's Hollywood Studios. Arriving a day early, you can join a tour with Disney. But you also get free parking there. Bargaining is encouraged! Guests visiting the park on the day of the launch will have to wait in the regular lines and pay the regular ticket price. Disney's Hollywood Studios is far from Disney's only theme park, and it also operates a 10-park ticket. The queue was pretty long as fans poured in to get into the park during its opening hours. Disney is partnering with YouTubers like Smosh, ASAP News, and Fortnite creator Epic Games to create Let's Plays for
